JACK KEARNS SAYS WILLARD WILL QUIT RATHER THAN TAKE WALLOPS

By ED W. SMITH.

(Noted Ring Expert and Referee.)

TOLEDO, Ohio, June 29.—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, thinks that Jess Willard will get such a beating next Friday that he will just sit in his corner and decline to come out for more punishment. If this does happen, it will be a record in ring history, for no champion ever lost his title without gamely taking all that was coming to him, even if it did come on the point of his chin and on his solar plexus.

I caught Kearns just after Dempsey, like a wild timber wolf, had leaped and crushed Bill Tate, his towering sparring partner.

"That's the way to fight and that's the way to train," remarked one bystander.

"I think so," said the manager, and then he started to unbutton himself of a few ideas that he had in mind.

"While we're discussing this thing of fighting let me tell you about something that has been on my mind for some time, and I want to make myself entirely plain.

No Secrets in Caves.

There is nothing in the Dempsey camp that is secret at all. Anybody who has confidence in me can come here at any time and find out what we are doing. A lot of stuff has been printed about how Dempsey will fight this big fellow on the Fourth; much of it is solid sense and a great deal more of it is rot.

"People come in here every day with suggestions about how Jack should fight. Some say he should stand off and box at long range with the champion, and others say he should buckle right in and tear away at the big chap's belly. They have a lot of ideas, some of them good and some of them utterly ridiculous.

"Now, what I want to say at this time about his system of fighting is just this: Jack Dempsey has only the one way of going in when time is called for the first round. He never did anything but this in his life, and it is my candid opinion that if he lives to be a hundred years old and is fighting every one of those years he will do nothing else but this.

"He'll tear in when the first bell is sounded, and will crowd the champion to the limit. He will go in, in that zigzag manner of his, wagging his head from side to side and ripping in all sorts of punches from every conceivable angle.

Jack Is a Bulldog.

"That's his only style, and what's the use of the critics talking of him using any other? Jack is a good boxer, but he is not fancy in anything that he does. He is a bulldog who knows nothing but fighting as soon as he hears the sound of the gong.

"And he'll give this champion, who isn't the greatest man in the world, the biggest surprise of his career when he gets his first taste of one of his punches. That's where I claim we have never in any time was such a fighter as Dempsey, and when I say this I don't care whom you take in—all the Sullivan and the Corbitts and the Fitzsimmons and the Jeffries and all that lot.

"All of the old-timers went by the book. By that I mean that they had the stereotyped way of proceeding when the bell rang. This fellow is totally different in every way. He doesn't box, he doesn't fiddle, he doesn't feel his man out. He doesn't do anything that the ordinary fighter does. He simply goes in there with the greatest smashes man ever delivered and nobody can stand up under the cannonading he will deliver.

"I'll repeat right here that Willard will be the first champion to ever sit in his corner and admit defeat. By that I mean that I believe that Willard

GRIFFS GRAB BOTH ENDS OF BARGAIN

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL.

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—Clark Griffith's Senators nabbed both ends of the double-header here Saturday from the back-stepping Athletics, 4 to 1 and 6 to 3. The Griffmen were in a hitting mood and twenty-one wallops rang off their bats. The twenty-one hits went for twenty-six bases. Listed among the many slams was a home run drive by Plimch.

The first game was all Griffith and the Mackmen never had a chance from the start. The second contest, however, was won only after an uphill struggle.

Amos Strout reported to Mack and was placed in right field. Jack Barry, the other half of the trade that sent Roth and Shannon to the Red Sox, has not put in his appearance. The boss expects Barry to report Monday or Tuesday. In the absence of Barry, Mack used "Snooks" Dowd, a twenty-year-old recruit, at second base. "Snooks" looked bad.

Jim Shaw Was Master.

Jim Shaw was nicked regularly by the Griff in the opening tilt. He went seven innings and was hit safely nine times. Kinney finished the game and allowed only one hit. Jim Shaw was a master with men on bases and he was never in serious trouble. He permitted eight safeties.

Harry Thompson, erstwhile Griffith, battled for Jim Johnson. Harry had an idea he could hit Jim Shaw, but he had another idea when he sat down. He sent a short fly to Murphy.

Mack is thinking about getting a head protector for Joe Dugan. He may get killed by a pop fly some of these days. He was slammed on the well-known bean by Rice's lift in the first game.

Grover Slams Three.

Roy Grover, who left the house of Mack only a few weeks ago, was as proud as the proverbial peacock every time he connected safely and he hit often too. He had three singles in a row in the first engagement.

Tilly Walker swung at a ball so hard he almost lost his balance in the open and Umpire Evans called it a ball. Much howling and protesting followed.

The fans at the stadium were for a bit when two were on in the fourth inning of the first game, but Jim Shaw put on a few extra tricks and Gawks whiffed.

Erickson Wins First.

Scott Perry suffered another reverse in the second game. The big Westerner was walloped all over the lot by the revived Griffmen and he was yanked in the eighth. Kinney succeeded him and he in turn gave way to Tom Rogers. Eleven hits bounced off Washington bats.

Erickson hurled good ball outside the first inning. He seemed to get stronger as the game progressed. He was nicked for nine hits and struck out an even dozen.

Erickson started rather weakly the Macks shoving over a couple of tallies in the opening inning. When the Griff had three twirlers warming up to hop to the rescue if Erickson showed a tendency to ascend.

Maurice Burrus, the young first baseman Mack picked up from Columbia, S. C., took George Burns' place in the second game and made a great hit with his sensational fielding.

Clyde Milan hurt his ankle sliding into third in the seventh inning of the nightcap battle but refused to retire.

The friendship that sprang up between Dowd and Erickson while they were with Detroit is all off when they step on the ball field. Erickson made the former Lehigh football star feel very unnecessary.

HE'S AFTER LEONARD.

Low Tander, Philadelphia's newsboy boxer, is hot on the trail of Benny Leonard. Tander was prevented from issuing a challenge from the ring in Philly at the Leonard-Dundee bout. Billy Gibson, Leonard's manager, threatening to keep the lightweight champion from facing Dundee if Tander's challenge was allowed. Now Leonard is not popular with Quaker City fans.

CHAMPION LOST THREE HOLES IN TITLE PLAY

By BRYAN MORSE.

D. Clark Corkran, 1919 Middle Atlantic Golf Association champion, a member of the Baltimore Country Club, made a remarkable record and one peculiar in golfing annals in taking the classic at Columbia Country Club yesterday. While Corkran failed to win the qualifying medal in the first day's play, he ultimately defeated the medalist and 1916 titleholder, W. C. Ballantyne. Corkran's record is thought to be almost unparalleled in golfing annals. During the two days of play en route to the title he lost but three holes. He won a default in the first round. Corkran's feat is all the more remarkable considering the fact that his left shoulder was tightly strapped with adhesive plaster.

Walter R. Tuckerman, of Chevy Chase, rated by many as one of the three best golfers in the District, went down before Corkran in the final by 10 to 5. Tuckerman's defeat was decisive. He won but one hole, the eleventh, after his turn. His golf was not of the best, to be sure, but he was shooting against Corkran's 38 for the first nine holes. And Corkran was not pressed to win, as he was six up at the time.

On Friday Corkran met and defeated Donald Woodward, in a 10 to 5 victory over the Columbia man. Corkran annexed nine straight holes, going out in 36. Woodward never won a hole in the match and halved but one before the players finished. In compelling the round indifferently, as nothing was at stake, Corkran shot a 78.

Corkran is the first M. A. champion since 1916, when Ballantyne won. In 1915 Eddie Rynon captured the event. In 1914 B. Warren Corkran, brother of the present champion, took the classic. Corkran's father was on hand to see the play yesterday. The present titleholder tore a ligament in his left shoulder a month ago. The injury was tightly strapped in the play during the past two days and caused him maveric pain at times.

Despite the injury, Corkran poked off drives of from 219 to 275 yards. He never used a brassie during the tournament and was either on or near enough for short chip shots on every hole. Corkran never took more than two putts on any green yesterday, and on three greens took but one putt.

Tuckerman defeated Walter McCullum in the semi-final by 3 and 2. In the second sixteen Albert R. MacKenzie, of Columbia, defeated S. M. Newton, of Richmond, by 6 and 5. The third sixteen honor went to Hugh MacKenzie, of Columbia, who defeated H. Crum Pack, of Richmond, by 7 up. H. R. Swartzell, Kirkside, won the fourth sixteen from J. T. McClellan, of Washington, by 4 and 3. G. Hume, of Norfolk, won the fifth sixteen from M. C. Woodward, of Columbia, by 4 and 3, while J. M. Scranage, of Rannockburn, won the sixth sixteen from H. M. Hall, of Kirkside.

Frank Busch, Fordham's star football and baseball player, impressed New York baseball writers favorably. He is playing utility infield roles with the Giants.

TEN HE GETS TWO.

Stanley Coveleskie, the Indians' twirler, went several weeks without pitching a shutout, then he got two in ten days.

CONNIE MACK SAYS CHICAGO WILL WIN

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—"The White Sox, in my opinion, will win the American League pennant," said Connie Mack last night. The Chicago players, collectively, are smarter than the Cleveland and Yankees. Cleotis is a wonderful pitcher and will help Kid Gleason to turn the trick.

If Cleotis is "doctoring" the ball he is entitled to get away with the trick as nobody has been able to detect his methods.

"The Yankees have the best pitching staff and it will not be surprising if they finish ahead of the Clevelanda.

"But I think you'll see the White Sox play the Giants in the next world's series for McGraw surely has put together a powerful ball club."
